MAKING GLOBAL CONNECTIONS

There's change on the horizon as Australia maps out its first national space policy. This special report examines the vital role satellite plays and the industry's next frontier

Australia's first commercial communications satellite

NewSat is Australia's largest specialist satellite communications company, delivering internet, voice, data and video communications via satellite, through its award winning Australian Teleport infrastructure. Jabiru-1, set to launch in 2014, will provide mission critical communications to government and enterprise customers across the Middle East, Asia and Africa.
